Following recent events we are reminded that we need to be prepared for injuries occurring to yourself and/or others during an active fight situation. InSights has expanded the LE Tactical First Aid curriculum to now include caring for blast-injuries.

InSights Instructor:

Dr. Mike Shertz is an active, board certified emergency medicine physician practicing in one of the busiest emergency departments in Oregon. His tactical experience was gained as a former US Army Special Forces Medic. He is a Special Deputy for the Washington County, Oregon Tactical Negotiations Team (S.W.A.T.) where he is the medical director as well as being actively involved in tactical operations. Mike serves as the medical director for a large fire department in Oregon.

Curriculum:

- adapting your basic First Aid skills to the realities of interpersonal trauma in an unsecured environment
- quickly and accurately determining the relative seriousness of an injury
- basic airway and ventilation assessment and management
- bleeding and shock assessment and management
- penetrating and blunt force trauma assessment and management
- extracting a person from a tactically unsecured location
- how to prepare a pocket first aid kit that will dramatically increase your treatment capabilities
