Evading Honesty™

"An unprecedented NEW approach to Roadside Interviews and Detecting Deception"

Course Description:

This dynamic Three-Day comprehensive course takes the attendee to the roadside, resembling a "Ride-Along" with the presenters, exploring a variety of topics relating to human interactions and effective communication techniques. Detailed instruction will provide an insight into the subconscious mind of an individual, how fear based responses affect the interactions, and how as a uniformed officer, the attendee can recognize signs of criminal activity while in contact with the general public. The attendee will be able to recognize keywords and phrases used by individuals during conversation, which are associated with nervousness, deception and can lead to identifying specific criminal activity, based on many factors present during the contact. This unique presentation allows the attendee to become familiar with his/her own strengths and weaknesses, learning how they affect their observational skills, and assists in becoming proficient in roadside interviews, by applying the learned skills and strengths in personal communication during interviews, while improving on their weaknesses. These techniques will be corroborated by the use of traffic stop videos, where the attendee can observe the techniques in-use by the presenter himself and clear see the effective results. Attendees will be presented with numerous traffic stop videos, have the ability to review, dissect, and begin to apply the learned tactics in a controlled, yet realistic setting. Adding to the contextual behavior recognition, this course explores various cultural attributes that can and will affect roadside interviews, based on the national origin of the persons involved. Understanding the cultural traits can be an effective tool in detecting the anomalies within a specific culture, as cultural influences affect the communication methods of various individuals. By the end of the two-day course, from the newest to the most experienced officer present at the training, each attendee will be able to understand communication techniques, recognize deceptive and nervous behavior, and be able to comfortably apply them in various settings, during their normal course of duty. From a traffic stop to interviewing witnesses in a calls for service situation, or in other contacts, these techniques are effective and provide maximum results in identification and apprehension of the criminal element encountered daily. The ability to recognize these behaviors will also assist in developing articulable reasonable suspicion on traffic stops and how to properly testify to them in court settings.
