Educational Partnership

The Washington State Criminal Justice Training Commission (WSCJTC) and the University of Wisconsin-Platteville have forged a partnership to offer online educational opportunities to criminal justice professionals for career development.

Course Overview

This non-credit course focuses on the role and function of the first-line supervisor in criminal justice agencies. The course curriculum was organized and developed in conjunction with the Management Advisory Committee (now known as the Career Development Advisory Committee) to the Training and Standards Bureau.

The course is delivered through a series of interactive online sessions and Web-based assignments. The topics include:

- Leadership, Values, and Decisions
- Vision and Team Leadership
- Organizational Structure and Resource Allocation
- Communication, Time, and Stress Management
- Problem Employees and Politics
- Ethics and Police Unions
- Community Policing and Performance
- Crisis Management

To earn the certificate of completion, the student must complete the following requirements for the course:

1. Read assigned readings and posted lectures.
2. Post answers to focus questions (apply readings and lectures to professional work situations).
3. Post responses to online group discussions.
4. Complete self-assessment assignments.
5. Complete one written capstone project.

It is estimated that students will spend 20 hours per month working on this course.

Payment Options

This course is supported by the Washington State Criminal Justice Training Commission for Law Enforcement and Jail Officers. Tuition for successful students is completely funded by the WSCJTC to its online training partner, the University of Wisconsin-Platteville, to enable officers to improve their career performance and satisfaction.

Course fees for non-mandated students will be $400. Payment will be collected through the Registrars Office at the Washington State Criminal Justice Training Commission.

This course can count towards criminal justice electives for the undergraduate criminal justice degree at UW-Platteville. For more information go to: www.uwplatt.edu/disted/criminal-justice.html

Textbook Information

Washington State Criminal Justice Training Commission will provide the textbook.

"I enjoyed the class and it was very informative to me. Though I've never had an online class it was easy and was interesting to check everyday the submissions given by other students in the class.

I was part of a police supervisory class once before this class. This class made me think I guess outside what I normally would think. I'm currently not a supervisor and this class was interesting to me and challenged me to think as a supervisor. It helped me to understand why our department's chief does the things he does. It was very interesting to read submissions by other officers or supervisors in other departments and to either get new ideas for our department, or to see that other departments are doing the same things as we are.

I would recommend this class to any officer in law enforcement. A lot of times you hear officers questioning why we do things or why the chief wants us to do this or that, and this class helps one to understand some of the reasoning behind and the benefits that can come from it."
